

Huckleberry | App Analysis

Onboarding, paywall timing, subscription offer, and free experience • Based on 39 supplied app screenshots

1 Onboarding

- Welcome screen offers Get started or Sign in. The parent selects Newborn, Infant, Toddler, or I'm expecting.
- Five illustrated introduction slides explain care tracking, one-tap timers, personalized guidance, and sleep support. The slides have a Skip option.
- Sign-up supports Apple, Google, or email. Setup then asks for the child's name and birthday, whether the child was born early, usual nap count, and last sleep time.
- The app asks for notification access (with Skip for now) and the parent's main goal: better sleep, care tracking, understanding the child, or another need.
- At completion it offers 14 days of Premium access and opens the tracking dashboard.

Assessment: The illustrated setup feels approachable and personal. Several questions add length, but they establish the child profile used for sleep guidance.

2 When does it ask for money?

- The captured onboarding does not require payment before entering the app. It presents 14 days of Premium access after setup.
- The subscription paywall is reachable from Settings → Huckleberry memberships, where Plus and Premium can be selected. It can be closed.
- Paid value is promoted at relevant moments: SweetSpot nap predictions, the Sleep Plan tab, and Berry AI parenting guidance.
- The membership screen says the initial free access needs no credit card.

3 Offer on the paywall

| Plan    | Monthly billing | Annual billing | Annual offer shown                     |
|---------|-----------------|----------------|----------------------------------------|
| Plus    | ₹1,199 / month  | ₹6,900 / year  | ₹575 / month equivalentSave 52%    |
| Premium | ₹1,499 / month  | ₹8,900 / year  | ₹741.67 / month equivalentSave 51% |

Prices above are the INR amounts visible in the supplied screenshots. Annual billing is emphasized with savings badges. The screen states recurring billing and “cancel anytime.”

- Plus: SweetSpot nap predictions and enhanced reports.
- Premium: Expert sleep plans and Berry, a 24/7 AI parenting assistant. The offer highlights night wakings, nap changes, personalized schedules, and sleep routines.
- Additional offer: 14 days of Premium access after onboarding; a referral banner offers a friend a free 30-day Premium pass.

4 What is available for free?

The app describes its free version as supporting feeding, diaper, sleep, and other care tracking. Basic daily logging is its free core. The captured interface shows sleep timers/manual entries, nursing and bottle logs, plus categories for pumping, solids, growth, temperature, medicine, milestones, and activity.

| Free core                                        | Paid features highlighted                           |
|--------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------|
| Basic sleep, feeding, diaper, and care tracking. | SweetSpot predictions and enhanced reports (Plus).  |
| Daily logging without a subscription.            | Expert sleep plans and Berry AI guidance (Premium). |

Scope note: The recorded session was within complimentary Premium access, so a visible feature is not automatically permanently free. The Sleep Plan screen explicitly says an expert-created plan is not included in free access.

Product takeaway: Huckleberry establishes a daily tracking habit first, then sells predictions and personalized guidance.

Napper | App Analysis

Onboarding, paywall timing, subscription offer, and free experience • Based on 68 supplied app screenshots

1 Onboarding

- Opens with Create a new baby profile; Sign in and invite options are also available. The app asks what the parent hopes to improve, how they found Napper, and their sleep goals.
- It collects the baby's birthday and name, asks whether the baby is a first child, offers a photo and more profile details, then asks the parent's name, age range, relationship to the child, and whether to add another family member.
- Several illustrated screens explain Napper's approach to infant sleep and its tailored schedule. Apple, Google, or email sign-up appears after this educational sequence.
- After the initial paywall, a guided tutorial asks the parent to record a wake-up time and explains the predicted nap schedule.

Assessment: The setup communicates personalization, but it is lengthy. The first subscription offer appears before the hands-on tracking tutorial.

2 When does it ask for money?

- The primary paywall appears immediately after sign-up, before the in-app tracking tutorial. Its "How your free trial works" timeline leads to a Try for ₹0 button. An X closes it.
- The tutorial offers upgrades for a more personalized sleep schedule and extra logging categories. Later, locked sounds, course lessons, and Trends and Statistics also prompt subscription.
- The parent can close or skip the upgrade prompts and reach the app's core sleep tracking view.

3 Offer on the paywall

|----------------|-------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------|
| Yearly         | ₹3,999 / year₹333.25 / month equivalent     | 7 days; "50% Discount!" badge |
| Quarterly      | ₹1,999 / 3 months₹666.33 / month equivalent | No free trial shown           |
| Monthly        | ₹699 / month                                    | No free trial shown           |

The yearly plan is preselected. Its trial timeline says access begins today, a reminder arrives on day 5, and the yearly charge occurs on day 7 unless canceled. The screen states ₹0 due today, then ₹3,999 when the trial expires.

Unlimited includes: A tailored sleep schedule that evolves with the baby, more than 30 sleep sounds and lullabies, an infant sleep course, wider care tracking, and trends and statistics.

4 What is available for free?

Closing the paywall leads to the app. The recorded free flow shows the main sleep schedule, basic sleep event tracking, a displayed nap prediction, and a small selection of unlocked sounds.

| Available in captured free flow                                           | Locked or promoted as Unlimited                                                         |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Wake-up, nap, bedtime, and night-waking logs; a displayed nap prediction. | More personalized, evolving sleep schedule.                                             |
| Some unlocked lullabies or soundscapes.                                   | Many sound and noise options.                                                           |
| First "Getting Started" course lesson.                                    | Later infant sleep course lessons.                                                      |
| Trends tab with demo charts.                                              | Actual trends and statistics.                                                           |
| Core sleep event shortcuts.                                               | Feeding, pumping, solids, diaper, temperature, and medicine shortcuts shown with locks. |

Product takeaway: Napper reveals its central sleep prediction before purchase. Broader care tracking, deeper guidance, and real statistics sit behind Unlimited.

Baby Connect | App Analysis

Onboarding, paywall timing, subscription offer, and free experience • Source: babyconnect_app.pdf, 34 screens

1 Onboarding

- Offers Create Account, Login, and Continue as guest. Account registration supports email, Apple, or Google and separates Parent/Family from Child Care/Nanny.
- Creates a child profile, offers an invitation to share it, asks which tracking areas matter, then gives a seven-step tour of logging, lists, summaries, and graphs.

2 When does it ask for money?

- A seven-day trial offer appears during setup after the child profile and preference questions. It can be closed. The recorded path accepts Apple's subscription confirmation before reaching the dashboard.

3 Offer on the paywall

- Family: ₹4,999/year (seven-day trial) or ₹699/month; up to five children. Professional: ₹10,900/year (seven-day trial) or ₹1,299/month; up to 15 children.
- The offer stresses unlimited entries and photos, family/caregiver access, exports, and continued access to saved data after subscription stops.

4 What is available for free?

- A guest path and close button are visible. Logging, child details, lists, summaries, and graphs are shown after a trial was activated; the screenshots do not establish which remain usable permanently free.
- The child-profile screen says a Family subscription is needed after the trial, or the profile can be linked to another subscribed account.

Baby Daybook | App Analysis

Onboarding, paywall timing, subscription offer, and free experience • Source: babydaybook_app.pdf, 16 screens

1 Onboarding

- A short setup welcomes the parent, creates a baby profile, offers sign-in for syncing, lets the parent choose units, and requests notification permission.
- Profile options include birthday, prematurity, sleep predictions, and day start/end times.

2 When does it ask for money?

- The Premium screen appears at the end of onboarding, before the dashboard. It has a close button. Premium is also promoted from Account and the Timeline.

3 Offer on the paywall

- Monthly: ₹319. Yearly: ₹1,899 with a seven-day trial (highlighted). Lifetime: ₹3,099 once.
- Benefits shown include family sync, personalized sleep predictions, expanded statistics and timeline, growth charts, reminders, and PDF export.

4 What is available for free?

- After closing the paywall, the dashboard and shortcuts for feeding, diapers, sleep, food, medicine, and other activities are accessible, along with basic statistics and development sections.
- The multi-day Timeline view shows a Premium prompt. The empty account does not establish how much detail free statistics show after logging data.

Pebbi | App Analysis

Onboarding, paywall timing, subscription offer, and free experience • Source: pebbi_app.pdf, 30 screens

1 Onboarding

- Starts with Start Logging or Set Preferences First. Baby-profile setup leads to a skippable tour of dashboard, household sync, insights, alarms, timeline, and adding events.
- The parent can then choose activities to track, such as feeding, sleep, nappies, growth, milestones, medication, and symptoms.

2 When does it ask for money?

- No subscription wall appears in the recorded initial setup. The dashboard opens first. Premium is introduced through an Unlock Predictions card, an Add Baby label, and Go Premium.

3 Offer on the paywall

- Monthly: 14 days free, then ₹299/month. Annual: 14 days free, then ₹1,999/year. Lifetime: ₹5,900 once.
- Premium includes care and growth predictions, AI summaries and check-ins, PDF reports, more carers/babies, symptom photos, and early feature access.

4 What is available for free?

- The dashboard, tracking categories, timeline, and basic Insights screen are reached without starting a trial. The offer states CSV export remains available free.
- The free household is presented as one baby and up to two carers; Premium expands this. The empty Insights screen needs more history, so the extent of free analysis is not shown.

Nappi | App Analysis

Onboarding, paywall timing, subscription offer, and free experience • Source: nappi_app.pdf, 28 screens

1 Onboarding

- Three skippable slides describe logging, watch/voice input, and family sharing. The user signs in, names the account, creates or joins a family, can invite caregivers, and chooses notifications.
- The final setup page explicitly says tracking is free and no card is required.

2 When does it ask for money?

- The user enters the dashboard without a paywall. Premium is promoted later from SleepSense, Lumi, a home banner, Settings, and the subscription sheet.

3 Offer on the paywall

- Yearly: ₹3,999/year, with one week free on the recorded purchase sheet. Monthly: ₹399/month; the screens do not clearly show a trial attached to this selection.
- Premium promises personalized SleepSense predictions, longer sounds, extended history/reports, solids guidance, expanded Quick Log and Lumi, and a family album.

4 What is available for free?

- The free plan explicitly includes sleep, feeding, diaper and other tracking, real-time family sync, 14 days of reports/trends, five-minute sound previews, and widgets.
- Lumi displays five free questions per month; Reminders shows one of eight active. This is the clearest set of stated free limits among the recorded apps.

The Wonder Weeks | App Analysis

Onboarding, paywall timing, subscription offer, and free experience • Source: wonderweek_apps.pdf, 13 screens

1 Onboarding

- The user chooses a language, starts the 10 Leaps flow, enters the baby's name, and can choose gender and a profile photo. Login and partner-code options are visible.
- The app calculates a personal leap chart and introduces notifications.

2 When does it ask for money?

- The purchase offer appears during onboarding after profile setup and introductory screens, before the recorded flow reaches a working dashboard. No trial is shown.

3 Offer on the paywall

- One month: ₹499. Three months: ₹999. All leaps (24 months): ₹3,499.
- The offer highlights developmental leaps and one subscription shared across two accounts.

4 What is available for free?

- Profile setup and preview screens are visible. The supplied sequence does not show a usable free dashboard or establish continuing free features after the purchase step.

Nara Baby | App Analysis

Onboarding, paywall timing, subscription offer, and free experience • Source: narababy_app.pdf, 28 screens

1 Onboarding

- The user creates or joins a family, creates an account and baby profile, chooses baby activities, and can set up private postpartum tracking.
- Notifications and caregiver invitations are optional. A founder welcome screen leads to the dashboard.

2 When does it ask for money?

- No paywall interrupts the recorded onboarding. The subscription offer appears later under Account → Subscription and can be closed.

3 Offer on the paywall

- Lifetime: ₹7,900 once (₹9,900 crossed out). Monthly: ₹799/month (₹999 crossed out). No trial is shown.
- The offer lists unlimited activity tracking and caregivers, trends/history, Apple Watch/Siri/Live Activities, export, and age-based guides.

4 What is available for free?

- Tracking, history, trends, guides, and family-management screens are reached before the offer. The recorded empty account shows section access but not unlimited usage or the exact limits of each action.
- The subscription screen claims some of the same broad categories as benefits, so a logged-use check is needed to establish the precise free limits.

Baby Tracker by Nighp | App Analysis

Onboarding, paywall timing, subscription offer, and free experience • Source: babytrackerbynighp.pdf, 14 screens

1 Onboarding

- The app starts with a baby-profile form: name, sex, birth date and time, plus an optional due date for premature-baby growth charts. A Join an existing group option is visible.
- After saving the profile, the tracking dashboard opens directly. There is no lengthy slide sequence in the recorded flow.

2 When does it ask for money?

- No paywall interrupts profile setup or basic tracking. The user reaches feeding entry forms, history, weekly charts, and Settings first.
- Settings identifies the current experience as Baby Tracker Free and offers Explore Plus and Remove Ads.

3 Offer on the paywall

- Plus Yearly: ₹4,999/year, marked “Save 30%.” Plus Monthly: ₹599/month. No free trial is shown. The subscription renews unless canceled.
- Plus offers personalized “What’s Next” cues for sleep, feeding, and nappy checks, along with ad-free tracking. Remove Ads: ₹499 as a separate one-time purchase without the Plus cues.

4 What is available for free?

- The recorded free experience includes feeding, nappy change, sleep, pumping, and other activity categories. Feeding expands into nursing, expressed milk, formula, and supplements.
- The user can reach entry forms, activity history, and weekly charts. Settings lists backup, device sync, and export options, although completion of those actions is not demonstrated.
- The app calls this Baby Tracker Free. Its paid distinction is predictive “What’s Next” cues and ad removal.

Tottli | App Analysis

Onboarding, paywall timing, subscription offer, and free experience • Source: tottli.pdf, 29 screens

1 Onboarding

- The user signs in with Apple, Google, or email, then chooses whether the baby has arrived or is expected. Setup collects the caregiver name, baby name and birthday, and asks what has been hardest lately.
- The flow offers an optional first feed or diaper log and a co-caregiver invite. Analytics and notification choices can be skipped. A first-week screen summarizes the ready timeline and next steps.

2 When does it ask for money?

- Premium is introduced during onboarding on the reminders screen: reminders require Premium or a trial. After the first-week setup screen, the app shows a trial explanation and a subscription paywall before normal exploration.
- The recorded flow continues to Home, Timeline, Insights and Settings with an account marked Free. Insights and Premium-labeled settings present further upgrade prompts.

3 Offer on the paywall

- Yearly: 7-day free trial, then ₹7,999/year, labeled “Save 61%.” It renews yearly and says “Cancel anytime.” Weekly: ₹399/week; the screenshot does not show a trial for that selection.
- Premium highlights sleep and feeding charts, an estimated nap window, care summaries, smart reminders, Watch logging and widgets. The trial explainer says features unlock immediately and the plan starts when the trial ends.

4 What is available for free?

- The Free account reaches Home and Timeline with feed, pump, diaper and sleep logging controls. Timeline shows day, week, month, quarter and year views. Settings labels Smart Stash and Today’s handoff Open, and displays milestone viewing and data import/export.
- Charts in Insights, food-journey allergen tracking, smart reminders, Live Activities and Siri & Shortcuts are marked Premium. The screenshots show access points; they do not demonstrate completion of every free action.
