Crunching your data

Algorithms + sleep research = true

Baby sleep may seem both arbitrary and highly individual, but the fact is that the same physiological functions govern sleep in babies and adults.

As a parent, the challenging part is identifying and meeting your baby's unique sleep needs - especially as they are always evolving.

It all comes down to three key issues.

Next

Problem #1

A circadian rhythm in the making

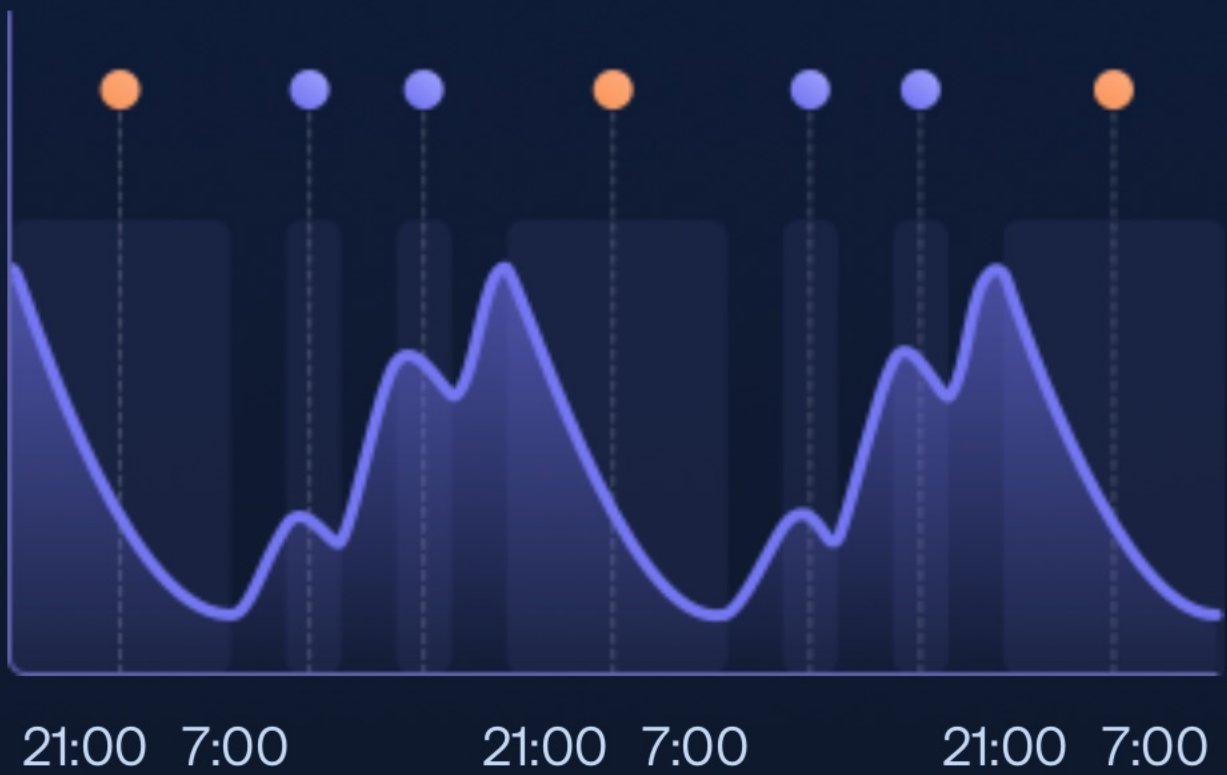

Babies begin developing a circadian rhythm around 8-12 weeks, but it takes much longer for it to fully stabilize. Like adults, babies have a natural tendency to be more of a morning or an evening person, but we are all capable of influencing our circadian rhythm through lifestyle choices.

Next

Sleep pressure

Problem #2

Different sleep pressure

The sleep-wake homeostasis regulates how long we can stay awake before needing to sleep. Often referred to as sleep pressure, it works like an internal battery. While most adults have a battery that lasts a day, babies need to recharge much more frequently.

Next

Age

Problem #3

Ever-changing needs

Children's sleep habits undergo rapid changes during the first two years of life. Just when we think we've got it figured out, they enter a sleep leap and everything gets turned upside-down again.

Next

The solution

Napper's advanced algorithms identify your baby's unique preferences and needs in each of these three key areas, providing you with a highly tailored sleep plan based on the results.

Napper finds your baby's natural rhythm

We identify and help you optimize your baby's circadian rhythm.

Napper adjusts to your baby's internal battery

We ensure that your baby never becomes overtired or undertired.

Napper grows with your child

We continually update and refine our recommendations based on your baby's evolving needs.

One important thing 🧡

We love helping families sleep better, but Napper isn't a medical app and shouldn't replace professional healthcare advice.

If you're ever concerned about your baby's health or safety, please reach out to a qualified healthcare provider.

We're your sleep companion, not your doctor—and that's exactly how it should be.

Got it, thanks!
